Alumni Spotlight

*Marley Kern,
class of 2017*

Marley participated in the 2015 OACS Global Service Program in Ecuador, where she worked at a school for children with severe disabilities. Building on her experience in Ecuador, Marley is now an elementary school special education teacher at a school that has a high Spanish-speaking population. In Ecuador Marley says she “learned what special education looks like in a different country, and it also helped me decide what type of students I work with.” Marley continues to participate in service through volunteering with Ballet Folklórico, an organization that celebrates traditional Hispanic dances, and GOAL, a soccer team for under-privileged children. She remembers some of her favorite moments in Ecuador by noting, “On my trip, we spent the weekend in Sinchiwarmi, a village that was maintaining the spirit of their culture by educating visitors through their museum, traditional housing, and dancing. Learning about their way of life expanded my knowledge of the world. We also went on a hike to a waterfall through the rain forest, which was easily one of the most amazing experiences I’ve ever had!” Marley’s trip to Ecuador directly impacted her career choices, and she continues to live out the OACS motto: Explore. Act. Reflect.

Vanderbilt Named a Pillar of Academia for Service

Vanderbilt University was ranked as the Pillar of Academia for the state of Tennessee, as well as being ranked #12 nationally, because of its commitment both to scholarship and service. As alumni, this is your legacy. You have shown students the importance of active citizenship both during your time at Vanderbilt and as you have gone out into a career. OACS wants to help you continue to connect and grow as you seek to be a change agent in our world. Because we know that service doesn't stop at graduation —our alumni rank community service as one of their highest values post-graduation.

So why wait? Connect with other alumni today and let's talk about how we can continue serving our community with a focus on empathy, accountability, and critical reflection in service.
