Promoting Belonging in the STEM Classroom: How Belonging is the Key to Inclusivity

Cait Kirby, PhD Candidate

This session will be tailored to teaching high school and middle school students, and will focus on inclusive teaching strategies. We will also discuss promoting student STEM identity and classroom belonging, especially as it pertains to students with different cultures, religions and the LGBTQIA+ community.

*Ms. Kirby is a PhD Candidate in Maulik Patel's lab at Vanderbilt. She studies mitochondrial DNA copy number regulation in C. elegans. She promotes inclusion in STEM fields and higher education by facilitating belonging and creating accessible educational resources.*
