

This Week is Transit Week – Try out Mass Transit Once this week!

Pledge to ride the bus once during Transit Week

Mayor Karl Dean has declared this week "Transit Week." Transit Now Nashville, a grassroots advocacy group, is asking people to sign an online pledge to ride the bus at least ONE time this week. If you are willing to do this, please go to the following address and join the list of names: <http://www.gopetition.com/petitions/pledge-to-ride-mta-during-transit-week/signatures.htm>.

If you have kids, call it a field trip. There are other Transit Week events planned as well, including a free movie at the Nashville Civic Design Center, Taken for a Ride, and a free workshop/charrette in which groups will develop ideas for a circulator transit route downtown.

For information about these and other events, please go to www.transitnownashville.org or look up Transit Now Nashville on Facebook.

For a fantastic article on the wide variety of commuting options supported by Vanderbilt, pick up the latest Vanderbilt View or click here <http://sitemason.vanderbilt.edu/vanderbiltview/articles/2009/03/30/not-the-same-old-commute.76492>

Start getting prepared – next Wednesday, April 22 is Earth Day! What are you planning to do to celebrate? We will be letting you know what SustainVU is up to in a separate email yet to come!

Have a great TRANSIT week!

Andrea George, Director
Sustainability and Environmental Management Office
Vanderbilt University