with Kira Sanbonmatsu of Rutgers University

Prof. Sanbonmatsu is co-author of the book A Seat at the Table: Congresswomen's Perspectives on Why Their Presence Matters. It includes unprecedented insights drawn from interviews of more than three quarters of the women who served in the 114th Congress (2015-2017). She is a Professor of Political Science at Rutgers University and Senior Scholar at the Center for American Women and Politics (CAWP) at the Eagleton Institute of Politics, where she is an authority on research areas related to gender and race/ethnicity in politics, political parties, public opinion, and state politics.
