America is in a kairos moment.

It is a time of immense reflection, equipping, and mobilization. The Public Theology and Racial Justice Collaborative's Summer Institute is designed to be the gathering place for those who discern the time. We are calling all scholars, students, clergy, community activists, community organizers, politicians, concerned citizens, artists, and strategists to Nashville, Tennessee for the convening of the first cohort of what we envision to be a think tank of leaders invested in the soul of our democracy.

Our aim this year is to equip participants to engage a wide public on the issues presented to racial minorities in the mid-term elections.
