A few of her research interests include...

Promoting social-emotional development of young children, both at home and in the classroom. She is really passionate about building children's social skills so they can interact with peers and build friendships. She is also passionate about supporting parents with children with challenging behavior!

What have you been researching in Barton Lab?

"I have been working on the Family Behavior Support App (FBSApp) as a parent coach and an app developer! Coaching was such an amazing experience because I was able to support families in individualizing and implementing strategies to prevent challenging behavior, teach new skills, and respond to behavior, all via telehealth! I am also working on a thesis with Lauren Schulte. We are running a social group for children to build appropriate social skills, specifically sportsmanship skills in an outdoor game!"

What do you hope to do after you graduate from Vanderbilt?

"I hope to either be a preschool teacher or a behavior analyst in a clinic! I am really open to any options in which I can use my newfound skills to support children and families."
