HERE'S THE STORY OF A LOVELY RESEARCHER...
LAUREN!

Meet Lauren, a 2nd year master's student!

She has been to 47 U.S. states! Her goal is to visit all 50. New Mexico, Oregon, and Alaska are the three she has left!

During undergrad, she spent two months teaching in a rural village in South Africa!

She is from Chicago (and grew up in the neighborhood right next to where Dr. Erin Barton grew up!)

A few of her research interests include...

Teaching social-emotional skills to young children. Her thesis is going to focus on using direct instruction, visual supports, verbal reminders, and reinforcement to teach sportsmanship behaviors during an outdoor game.

What have you been researching in Barton Lab?

"I created a visual analysis protocol! This protocol is designed as a tool to help researchers systematically evaluate data in single case research. Specifically, it is set up to help researchers determine if there is a functional relation between an intervention and the behaviors being measured across several single case designs or studies."

What do you hope to do after you graduate from Vanderbilt?

"After I graduate, I hope to teach in an inclusive early-childhood setting for a little while. Eventually, I'd like to work as a behavior analyst, either in a school setting or in a clinic. I hope to work in either Chicago or Nashville!"
